Laudato Si' et Fratelli Tutti

Centre Sèvres, Paris, France

1) Brief description of the Course (Course Goals and Objectives)	The course proposes an exploration of Laudato si' and Fratelli Tutti, encyclicals read in resonance with the dynamic of the common good, at the heart of Christian social thought. This notion will be analyzed on the basis of Gaston Fessard, sj's proposal for a "genesis of the common good in history" in dialogue with Pope Francis' advances and proposals in terms of integral ecology. This online course requires no prerequisites, other than the desire to read and work on the reception of these magisterial texts, which constitute a promise of intelligibility of the common world, exhorting us to build together new paths of creative reception... This online course offers video lessons, readings and exercises. A collective discussion on Zoom is proposed each week with the teacher. Content available online until March 1.

Language et vérité

Centre Sèvres, Paris, France

1) Brief description of the Course (Course Goals and Objectives)	This course examines the relationship between truth and the language that expresses it, i.e. our ability to say something that is true. It touches on the very foundation of the philosophical enterprise. The philosopher in search of truth knows that he can be played by the language in which he expresses himself, and deceive those who listen to him. But misology, the renunciation of reason, is just as serious a risk for the philosophical process. We will follow the history of philosophy from Plato to Nietzsche, not to make history but to situate problems. This online course offers video lessons, readings and exercises. Each week, a group discussion on Zoom is organized with the e teacher. Content available online until March 1.

S'exercer à penser et agir avec Hannah Arendt

Centre Sèvres, Paris, France

1) Brief description of the Course (Course Goals and Objectives)	Exercises in political thought are at the heart of Hannah Arendt's life and work. This course aims to meet three challenges: to make Arendt's thought better known, to respond to her urgent invitation to think for oneself and act together, and to combat the radicalization of debates and the rise of extremes. Particular attention will be paid to the "miraculous" powers proposed by Arendt - the power to speak and to act, the power to begin anew, the powers to forgive and to promise - as well as to the place of religions in human affairs. This online course features video lectures, readings and exercises. A one-hour collective discussion (disputatio) on Zoom is organized each week with the teacher. Content available online until March 1.

Introduction to Probability for Data Science

Saint Joseph University of Beirut – Beirut, Lebanon

1) Brief description of the Course (Course Goals and Objectives)	This is a first course in probability. We begin by considering some graphical displays to summarize data. We will then introduce some fundamental concepts necessary for the study of probability, such as the sample spaces, and events. We will explore counting techniques and use them to compute probabilities of events in equiprobable spaces. We will discuss conditional probability, independence, and the Bayes' theorem. We will study probability distributions of both discrete and continuous random variables, the concepts of sampling distributions and asymptotic limiting distribution (the central limit theorem).

La fabrication du saint, du héros et de l'ennemi

Saint Joseph University of Beirut – Beirut, Lebanon

1) Brief description of the Course (Course Goals and Objectives)	La fabrication de la figure du héros, du saint et de l'ennemi est un processus complexe qui se développe dans le conscient et l'inconscient collectif. Pour en saisir l'ampleur, il importe de repérer ses causes, ses mécanismes et ses étapes. Comment se fabrique la figure du héros invincible, du saint et de l'ennemi ? quelles sont ses fonctions ? Comment est-elle instrumentalisée dans la politique, l'économie et la vie sociale ? quelle typologie et quelles sont les situations qui nécessitent la fabrication de ces figures? Si cette figure est fabriquée dans le discours, sa déconstruction serait-elle possible et comment?

The Ministry of the Bishop. Theological Approaches from the Second Vatican Council to the Present

Sankt Georgen Jesuit College for Philosophy and Theology, Frankfurt, Germany

Philosophisch-Theologische Hochschule
SANKT GEORGEN e.v.

1) Brief description of the Course (Course Goals and Objectives)	The global Synodal Process launched by Pope Francis affects, among other things, the ministry of the bishops in the Catholic Church. Conceiving “synodality” as a way of decision making, decision taking in the Church is reserved to the bishops. However, misuse of power is never excluded. In the past, numerous cases of spiritual and sexual abuse in the Catholic Church have been covered up by the bishops. In liberal societies, procedures of checks and balances have proven their efficiency in preventing the misuse of power in politics. Thus, separation of powers in the Church might help to prevent episcopal failure. Nevertheless, how to reconcile such procedures with the theological emphasis laid by the Second Vatican Council on the ministry of the bishop? The seminar examines the Council’s approach to the ministry of the bishop particularly in the documents “Lumen Gentium” and “Christus dominus”. It outlines the traditional understanding of the bishop’s ministry, the post-conciliar debates, and its deposit in Canon Law. Finally, it delineates the current theological debates on the ministry of the bishop related to the global Synodal Process.

The Psychology and Philosophy of Implicit Bias

Munich School of Philosophy, Munich, Germany

1) Brief description of the Course (Course Goals and Objectives)	In less than two decades, implicit bias has become a major topic of research in both psychology and philosophy. The expectation was that implicit bias could explain why discrimination and inequality persisted, even though explicit racism, sexism and the like were taken to decline. In recent years it has become clear that many questions are still unanswered, and several problems have emerged. First and foremost, the Implicit Association Test (IAT) may not be a reliable and valid measure of a person's implicit biases. Another problem is that it is not completely clear in what sense implicit bias exactly are implicit and biased. Related to that, a plethora of suggestions on how implicit bias can be diminished and whether and to what extent agents are responsible for them have arisen. In this seminar, we will read several philosophical papers that address these issues, and also pay attention to the interpretation of psychological research. The seminar is connected to Dr. Asma's research project "Implicit bias: What are we missing?", funded by the DFG.
