COURSE DESCRIPTION

Religions are called to be a part of the solution for world peace, rather than contributing to be part of the conflict. The two largest religions on the planet bear a significant responsibility in this endeavor. Therefore, fostering mutual understanding between Christianity and Islam is essential, leading to mutual appreciation and collaboration. This course aims to serve as an introduction to the theological dialogue between Islam and Christianity. After providing a general overview of both religions, we will delve into their individual perspectives on each other, and the possibility of embracing an inclusive view of religious otherness, as well as the potential to shape pluralistic societies. Special emphasis will be devoted to the contemporary official texts of both religions.
